

EVERY DRUGGIST A LAW INTO HIMSELF.

Easy for Dispensers to Make Fatal Mistakes in Dealing Out Poisons.

No Statutory Regulation for a Separate Locked Compartment and Plain English Labels.

INSTANCE OF HENRY HARTMANN.

His Little Daughter, Desiring to Help Him, Emptied Oxalic Acid into the Epsom Salts Drawer and Bernheim Was Nearly Killed.

When Druggist Henry Hartmann, of No. 122 Forest street, Brooklyn, dispensed two ounces of oxalic acid Saturday morning to a messenger sent by Isaac Bernheim, of No. 183 Flushing avenue, who had asked for the same quantity of Epsom salts, the fact was established beyond a reasonable doubt that the public is at the mercy of careless druggists.

The fact was also adduced that, under the system adopted by some pharmacists in conducting their business, no one is safe in their hands even in purchasing as simple a remedy as Epsom salts. The mistake of Hartmann is similar to that which was alleged to have occurred in the case of Otto Odendahl, who died from strychnine poisoning, last October, when he took a dose of Epsom salts that was suspected of being mixed with the other drug.

No law in this State governs the classification of poisons as a German statute does, which requires that all poisons be kept under lock and key in a separate compartment. Careful druggists see to it that dangerous drugs are labeled in such a manner as to call the immediate attention of the compounder to the fact, and instead of following out an old-time custom of arranging their jars, inscribed with Latin labels, alphabetically, they place all dangerous substances in spaces in some remote section of their stores.

That Druggist Hartmann, though not the immediate cause of an error, which almost proved fatal, displayed lax methods, has seemingly been shown by his statement.

HOW THE MISTAKE OCCURRED.

Feeling ill on Saturday, Mr. Bernheim, who keeps a distillery one block from Hartmann's store, sent his nephew, Michael Haym, for a dose of Epsom salts. As soon as Haym made known his want, Hartmann, so he has said, turned to a drawer just behind the cash drawer, inscribed "Magnesia Sulphate," containing about three-quarters of a pound of the drug which he supposed was what the inscription called for. With a little tin scoop, which lay half covered up by the drawer's contents, he filled a paper with two ounces of the stuff.

Young Haym quickly ran across the street, and five minutes after he left the store. Mr. Bernheim's wife had stirred the mixture in half a glass of water. He felt no ill-effects and was preparing to lie down for a short nap, when his nephew took a nip of the drug to see how it tasted, and immediately pronounced it poison. A minute later Mr. Bernheim was attacked by griping pains, and the boy ran back to the drug store as fast as his legs could carry him.

"Are you sure you gave me Epsom salts," asked Haym.

"Why, to be sure I did," replied Hartmann, with a laugh; "what joke are you trying to play on me now?" Then he opened the drawer supposed to contain Epsom salts, and his finger, to which a small particle of the powder adhered, and touched it.

"My God, have you given your uncle any of this?" Hartmann gasped. Haym replied in the affirmative, and both the boy and the druggist were soon speeding toward Bernheim's house. An emetic, which the druggist prepared, was given. The boy said Hartmann said, after Bernheim had passed beyond the danger point, "I put up oxalic acid, mixed with Epsom salts, instead of Epsom salts, and I cannot imagine how the mistake was made."

A subsequent investigation on the druggist's part, it is alleged, revealed the astonishing fact that his twelve-year-old daughter, thinking to help her father, had brought down from the attic, above a package of oxalic acid, some of which had been used to remove iron stains from linen wear, and without consulting him had placed it in the drawer marked "Magnesia Sulphate."

THE DRUGGIST'S EXPLANATION.

In answer to a query yesterday, Hartmann said:

"I know it was an awful blunder. You see, if the druggists in this country were only compelled to keep poisons separated all this trouble would not have happened."

"In your daughter in the habit of meddling with the affairs of your drug store?"

"No, not often," he replied. "Once before I believe she brought something down from my apartments overhead, but it was under my direction. The nurse has been a considerable quantity of the salts still in the drawer when she poured the acid in, and I am sure she would not now be alive to tell of his fortunate escape."

Then he pointed to the drawer where the Epsom salts are kept, and walked six feet or more toward the rear of the store to show on the shelf where the oxalic acid is kept in a glass bottle.

"You can see for yourself," he continued, "that no mistake could have been made by me setting it in the wrong place. He displayed a book containing a record of poisons sold and the names of the purchasers, as he explained, to show how careful he was."

"We have an awful responsibility resting upon us," he added, "in conducting our business, as for example, my wife is addicted to the use of morphine. Two months ago she got up in the middle of the night, unbeknown to me, took my key to the store from my pocket, and went down stairs in search of the drug. Then, as I afterward learned, to deceive me she took a receipt of a box of the morphine jar to a receipt of her own and then placed an equal quantity of quinine in the empty morphine jar."

QUININE IN THE MORPHINE.

"I never learned of her act until I had compounded a prescription with morphine in it and was apprised that I had used quinine instead. My poor wife is now in the Kings County Hospital, a confirmed morphine addict."

L. T. Perkins, secretary of the Brooklyn Board of Pharmacists, who has a store at No. 15 Greene avenue, when asked about the proper classification of poisons drugs, showed that he was very careful in this respect.

"There is no law," he said, "to compel us to keep our stores in any particular way, but every man should be a law unto himself. In a case like Hartmann's, if it can be shown that he has been negligent in any way the Board of Pharmacists has the power to revoke his license at once. Surely Hartmann has been in the business long enough to know how to safely conduct a drug store."

DIED IN A TENEMENT HALL.

A Young Tailor Out of Work and Dependent Drank Carbolic Acid.

Max Rosenberg, a tailor, seventeen years old, who resided at No. 70 Broome street, was found lying unconscious in the hall of the tenement, No. 41 Hester street, shortly before noon yesterday. An ambulance from Governor's Hospital was sent for him, but he died before it came, and which had contained carbolic acid was found on the floor near where he lay.

The boy's father, who is 23 years old, was established by letters found in his possession. It is believed that he committed suicide by drinking carbolic acid. The vial which had contained the stuff bore the label of L. Bokschnitzky, a druggist of No. 302 Allen street. The police learned from the druggist that Rosenberg came into the place this morning and purchased the acid, saying he wanted it for medicinal purposes. He gave the name of G. Levy and said he lived at No. 70 Allen street. At that number the police found Rosenberg's sister. She went to the station house and identified the body. She said that her brother had been out of work for some time and was despondent.

WHEN THE FIRE ORIGINATED.

MR. ARMIGER.

RESCUE OF MRS. ARMIGER.

Scenes from the Baltimore Fire.

The residence of James R. Armiger, one of Baltimore's first citizens, was burned on Sunday morning. Seven people lost their lives at the time of the fire, from causes of the conflagration is attributed to defective hot-air pipes in the cellar, which, being in too close proximity to a wooden partition, set it on fire. It is believed that several members of the family, and Mr. Manuel, a New York broker, visiting them, might have been saved had they not imperilled their lives attempting to rescue the children. It was through the heroism of District Fire Chief McAfee that Mrs. Armiger was taken out in safety. Mrs. Marion Chamblin, who perished in the fire, was the widow of father of Mr. Armiger, and was but thirty years of age. She was considered one of the handsomest women in Baltimore.

AT THE PLAYS LAST NIGHT.

Sydney Rosenfeld's "Two Escutcheons" Revived at the Garden with a Strong Cast.

Daily Version of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" at the Grand Opera.

OLCOTT SEEN IN "THE IRISH ARTIST."

John Drew Returns to the Garrick and "Chimney Fadden" Moves to the Standard—Vaudeville and Music Hall Novelties.

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 24.—A movement is under way to convert lands in the town of Caldwell, at Lake George, including the historic sites of Old Fort George and Fort William Henry, about which cluster memories of the French and Indian wars, into a public park.

A bill appropriating not over $10,000 for the purchase of 125 acres, which is wanted for the purpose, is to be introduced in the Legislature. The proposed park is to be under the custody of the State Association for the Preservation of Science and Historic Places and Objects, whose headquarters are in New York City.

Paymaster-General Terrell Retired.—Washington, D. C., Feb. 24.—Colonel Charles M. Terrell, Assistant Paymaster-General, U. S. A., was sixty-four years old to-day, and was accordingly placed on the retired list on account of age. Colonel Terrell is stationed at San Antonio, Tex. He is a brother of A. W. Terrell, United States Minister to Turkey.

Yale's New Junior Board.—New Haven, Conn., Feb. 24.—The annual election of a Yale "Lit" Board from the junior class was held this evening in the old chapel and resulted as follows: C. P. Kitcher, of East Liverpool, O.; C. B. DeCamp, Cincinnati, O.; C. E. Thomas, Belle Plaine, Ill.; F. T. Thayer, Brooklyn, N. Y.; and N. A. Smyth, New Haven, Conn.

OBITUARY.—Rev. William H. Boole, one of the leading Methodist ministers of Staten Island, died at his home in Fresh Pond, N. Y., yesterday afternoon. He was one of the founders of Prohibition Park and was a trustee of the association. Rev. Boole and Rev. Dr. Haskell, superintendent of Prohibition Park, had an altercation on Friday evening last, and Rev. Boole was expelled from the park. He was a native of New York, and was a member of the Brooklyn, Germania and Maccabi clubs. A widow and four children survive him.

Professor William Channing Russell, eighty-two years old, died yesterday at his home in Yonkers from the effects of a stroke of paralysis. Professor Russell's mother was a sister of Rev. Dr. William H. Russell, the noted Unitarian minister. Mr. Russell was graduated from Columbia College in 1862 and afterward practiced law in New York for thirty years. He was acting president of Cornell College for three years. Seven children survive him.

Otto Julius Egers, of Egers & Melanin, shipping agent, at No. 5 South William street, died at his home, No. 214 St. John's place, Brooklyn, Sunday night from pneumonia. He was a member of the Maritime Exchange. His original members of the Brooklyn, Germania and Maccabi clubs. A widow and four children survive him.

FOURTEENTH STREET.—One of Chauncey Olcott's most successful plays, "The Irish Artist," was revived at the Fourteenth Street Theatre last night. This singing comedian has had a most successful run in "Mavourneen," and promises to be equally popular in his revival. As Maurice Cronin, the Celtic knight of the leading role was supported by an excellent company, and Shakespeare's famous comedy was produced on a scale of grandeur that has seldom been equalled.

STANDARD.—Charles H. Hopper removed his successful play "Chimney Fadden" to the Standard Theatre last night, and a host of friends was on hand to give him a royal welcome. "Chimney" fought his battles over again with renewed vigor and posed as the champion of the weak and oppressed in his usual humorous way. Marie Bates won new laurels in her new surroundings, and the balance of the cast came in for equal shares of applause.

GAIRICK.—Fresh from Philadelphia triumphs, John Drew returned to this city yesterday and began an engagement at the Garrick Theatre in "The Squire of Dames," which was doing an enormous business at Palmer's which naturally calls for delicate skill. The house was packed to overflowing, and Miss Fuller was liberally rewarded with applause for her clever exhibition.

In the lobby of Koster & Bial's were many beautiful floral tributes, which were given to La Lole in the course of the evening.

Some of the prominent people who witnessed La Lole Fuller's first appearance were Chauncey M. Depew and party, Charles Frohman, A. H. Maguire, Fred. D. Yungling, A. H. Hummel, L. H.
